

Addressing Issues that Matter

The power of membership

One of the many benefits of membership in The Sulphur Institute (TSI) is the unparalleled level of industry experience of the member companies. With access to individuals with vast sulphur experience, TSI is able to thoroughly examine the challenges facing the industry and create real, usable solutions for member companies which no individual company can achieve on its own. Here is a brief overview of TSI's issue resolution process.

Discovery

To maintain timely awareness of the sulphur industry, TSI carefully monitors industry news, direct member feedback, experienced sources and various reports across the sulphur industry.

Assessment

When a question, issue or request for information is raised, TSI works to assess the scope and identify the proper task force or program with the expertise to address most effectively. Typically, the issue is brought to a working group member forum within the Transportation Regulations and Logistics or Environment Health and Safety working groups. TSI's members are engaged in early discussions and opportunities for early input. TSI staff also calls on decades of experience to identify potential industry challenges.

Development

Once an issue has been assessed, TSI develops an action plan to address and resolve the issue. Task groups lay out the next steps while industry leading practices are identified and roles and responsibilities for action are defined. Reports, written communications and presentations are then developed from the action plan to educate TSI members on how the industry is responding.

Distribution

TSI uses its distribution channels to put information in the hands of TSI members faster than individual companies can manage on their own. Through newsletter coverage, member-only communications and member-only white papers, TSI members can make decisions and develop solutions to the latest issues facing the industry.

Lasting Impact

When TSI members collaborate on issues facing the sulphur industry, their work leaves a lasting impact. Through industry association outreach, communications with regulatory agencies, presentations and webinars, TSI consistently solidifies its status as the leading voice representing the sulphur industry.

The collective knowledge and experience of TSI make it the most credible and sought-after source for accurate information related to the sulphur industry.

TSI members routinely address challenges facing the sulphur industry through collaboration.