PotashCorp, Union Tank Car and Uralchem Join TSI Cite Value to their Businesses

WASHINGTON, DC, May 16, 2011 – The Sulphur Institute recently welcomed three more members to its organization. Catherine Randazzo, TSI president and CEO, remarked, “The addition of these companies further demonstrates how TSI serves the entire sulphur industry. Here, we have a consumer, a rail car manufacturer, and a major international fertilizer company based in Russia, all recognizing the value TSI provides its members.”

“These companies have already dedicated personnel to participate on TSI’s program working groups. By getting involved, these representatives will help identify priorities for the industry and address them, whether relating to transportation, the environment, health, safety or agriculture,” stated Mark Whittemore, executive vice president, ICEC, a division of Oxbow Carbon, and TSI chair. “We look forward to welcoming additional members to this valuable global organization as we speak for all involved in the business of sulphur,” he added.

Founded in 1960, TSI represents all stakeholders actively engaged in producing, buying, selling, handling, transporting, or adding value to sulphur on a global basis.
